POETRY.

From the Puritan Recorder.
THE MINISTER'S QUARTERLY PAY-DAY.

As the parson sat at his books one day, A rap at his door startled him to pay The Society's Quarter fee.
A hundred dollars, and fifty more,
Were counted the parson's due, Though a small sum this, for a half a score.

To victual clothe and shoe.

But the day had come, and for youthful sport

The parsonage ne'er displayed A day like that, when his scant support Was about to be promptly paid.

The children danced, and giggled, and grinned,

And wriggled like eels in oil;
And smiles broken forth on the visage thinned

By fasting and tears, and toil.

The Parish Collector sat him down, And out of his pocket took

The tithe he'd gathered about the town Crammed into his pocket book;— It was not much of a cram at that, Enough honey and milk indeed, Not milk enough for a starving cat,
Not honey enough for need.

But such it was without much risk, The Collector poured it out.

He spread it round on the parson's desk And scattered it all about;—
But little of shining gold was there, And less from the silver mine, And bank bills,—they were exceedingly rare;

Alas! for the poor divine.

First came a note for a little sum, Which the poor man had given

To a rich parishioner, near his home, Whom he hoped to meet in heaven;— Ten dollars was all,—not much I know, But an order followed the note, With butcher's bill, and a bill or so For butter and bread, to boot.

The doctor has drawn for his small amount.

The grocer has filed his claim,
And all intended their bill should count Whenever his pay-day came.

The good Collector reckoned them up;
The minister stood aghast!
'Twas a bitter drug in his brimming cup,
To think he had lived so fast.

Who knows what pain the parson endures,
As the good man hands them o'er,
And says, with a grin, "Sir these are yours."

And they should have been paid before!

For a scandal it is to religion, Sir, Which the world can never forget, When a man of ease like a minister Is unable to pay a debt.

"And here besides is a lot of cash, Three fives and a lusty ten;
Your daughters in satins now may dash,
And your boys dress up like men;
But allow me to say, good Parson Gay, You'd better just lay aside A little of this for a rainy day, By a walk instead of a ride.

"For money is scarce, and the times are hard,
And you, Sir, are getting gray, And you may not fare as you have fared!

Should the people turn you away.
We've given you here a large support And the farmers all complain, That the crops this year will be dreadfully short

If we don't soon have some rain.

"We can't long pay such enormous sums
As we have to pay you now, For you know that the pay-day often comes

And the Squire has lost a cow;—
And one of Goodman's sheep is dead, And he feels poor this year."

The tender shepherd here turned his head,

To drop—for the sheep—a tear!

Of this the collector no note took,
He gabbled his story through,
Then slowly folded his pocket book,
And looked as if he knew.

He took his hat, with a cheerful smile, Rejoiced in a duty done;
Then rode away to his home a mile,
At set of December's sun.

The Parson rose, as he left the room, And bowed with a smile of grace, But his heart resembled a ruined tomb, In spite of his smiling face.

He closed the door and resumed his chair,

Till, amid his griefs and fears,
He seemed half choked for breath of air, Then burst into a flood of tears:

He thought of his children's needy feet, His barrel of meal was gone; And the question arose, "What shall we eat!

What raiment shall we put on?"
He thought of the ravens, how they're fed,

How the lilies' garments grow;
But when was a raven's rent unpaid?
Or a lily arrayed for snow?

With tender emotions all astir, In the parson's heaving breast,

His children's mother,—he thought of her.

How she, who had done her best, Still needed a hood, and cloth, and thread, A dress, and a thicker shawl,— Till, pressed in spirit, he lurch'd & stagger'd To the door.

The evening came, and he met his wife, And his blooming children nine, Yet nought they saw of the inward strife.

That harassed the sad divine:— He sat serene in the central seat,
And his wife sewed near his side,
His children hovered about his feet,
And he to be cheerful tried.

But when he went to his nightly bed,
To sleep till the waking morn, He felt as he pilloved his aching head, That he wished he had ne'er been born,

And all that night was his pillow drowned
With the tears no eye could see, But his, who once for the thankless groaned,
And bled upon Calvary's tree.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"PEACE AT HOME."

It is just as possible to keep a calm house as a clean house,—a cheerful house, an orderly house as a furnished house, if the heads set themselves to do so. Where is the difficulty of consulting each other's wants, as each other's temper's as well as each other's character?
Oh! it is by leaving the peace at home to chance, instead of pursuing it by system, that so many houses are unhappy. It deserves notice also that almost any one can be courteous forbearing and patient in a neighbor's house. If any thing go wrong, or be out of time or disagreeable there, it is made the best of, not the worst; even efforts are made to excuse it and to show it is not felt or, if felt, it is attributed to accident, not to design; and this is not only easy but natural in the house of a friend. I will not therefore, believe that what is so natural in the house of another is impossible at home, but maintain without fear that all the courtesies of social life may be upheld in domestic societies husband as willing to be pleased at home and anxious to please as in his neighbor's house, and wife as intent making things comfortable every day to her family as on set days for her guest could not fail to make their own home happy. Let us not evade the points of the remark by recurring to maxims about allowances for temper. It is folly to refer to our temper, unless we prove we have given anything good by giving way to it. Fits of ill humor punish us quite as much if not more than those they are vented upon; and it actual requires more effort, and inflicts more pain to give them up than would be requisite to avoid them.

SINGULAR CASE OF INSTINCT IN A HORSE.—We do not remember ever to have heard of a more remarkable exhibition of unique intelligence than was communicated to us a few days since by Mr. Allen, of this place. The circumstances as they were related to us, are as follows: Mr. Allen has had for a considerable time a span of sprightly little horses that he has never separated.
In the stable, in the field in the barn, they have always been together. This has caused a strong attachment to grow up between them. A few days ago he went with them out to Lake Minnetonka on a fishing excursion. Taking them out of the carriage, he led them down to the lake, and tied them with stout ropes several rods apart on a strip of grass that grew upon the shore, and left them to feed.
Returning to the shanty, he threw himself upon the floor to await the return of the party who had repaired to the lake to fish.

Not much time had elapsed before the sound of an approaching horse's feet attracted his attention and a moment after one of his span appeared at the door. The animal put his head in, giving one neigh returned at a slow gallop yet under evident excitement, to the spot where but a few moments before he and his companion had been seemingly safely fastened.
Surprised to find his horse loose, and struck with singular conduct Mr. A. immediately followed and found the other lying in the water entangle in the rope struggling to keep his head from being submerged.

While Mr. A. proceeded to dis-engage the unfortunate horse his noble benefactor stood by manifesting the utmost solicitude and sympathy and when his mate was extracted from his situation and again upon his feet terra firma, the generous creature exhibited the most unquestionable signs of satisfaction and joy. That this intelligent animal should have noticed the misfortune of his mate, that he should have in his efforts should sunder a three fourths of an inch rope and finally that he should exhibit so high an appreciation of the event are circumstances to astonish us and commend themselves to the thoughtful consideration of those who would limit the power of reasoning to the "genius homo."—St.

Anthony's Express.

The Savannah Morning News, of the 25th inst says:

A gentleman who has lately traveled extensively in the interior of this State, informs us that the drought has been as extensive as it was during the year 1843, and that the prospects of the Cotton and Corn crops are gloomy in the extreme. In Houston and the adjoining counties the stand for Cotton was good but in consequence of the want of rain the weed is very small, and consequently a small yield will follow. The corn crops look very bad the season being now too far advanced, even with rain for it to recover its growth and produce even a moderate yield.
In some of the counties not more than a half a crop will be made.
In Monroe and the adjacent counties, the corn looks equally unpromising and many of the planters will not make the seed they planted.
In fact from all parts of the State we have sad accounts of the Cotton and Corn crops, and the planters prospects unusually discouraging. It said by some that it will take the Cotton crop to pay for the Corn which the planters will be required to purchase.

Life of Real Life.

THE LAST OF THE RUTHVENS.

After a while Lord Gowrie came to her side, so changed, he might have lived years in that brief hour. "Let-tice," he said, "let there be peace and forgiveness between us. I will go away; you shall not be pained by more wooing. Only, ere I depart, tell me if there is any hope in patience or long waiting, or constant, much enduring love?" She shook her head mournfully.

"Then what was mine to win is surely already won. Though you love me, still you love; I read it in your eyes. If so, I think it would be best in mercy to tell me. Then I shall indulge in no vain hope: I shall learn to endure perhaps to conquer at last.
Let me, tell me one word—no more."

But her quivering lips refused to utter it.

"Give me some sign—ay, the sign that need be to one of death!—let your kerchief fall!"

For one moment her fingers instinctively clutched it tighter, then they slowly unclasped. The kerchief fell!

Without one word or look Lord Gowrie turned away. He walked with something of his old, proud step to the alley's end, then threw himself down on the cold, damp turf, as though he wished it had been an open grave.

When the little circle next met, it was evident to Lettice that Lord Gowrie had unfolded all to his faithful and loving younger brother. Still Patrick betrayed not his knowledge, and went on in his old dreamy and listless ways.
Once, as pausing in his reading, he saw Lettice glide from the room, pale and very sad, there was a momentary change in his look. It might be pity, or grief, or reproach, or what none could tell.
He contrived so as to exchange no private word with her until the next morning, when lounging in his old place, idly throwing pebbles into the river, and watching the watery circles grow, mix, and vanish there came a low voice in his ear.

"Master Patrick Ruthven!"

He started to hear his full name uttered by lips once so frank and sisterly, but he took no notice.

"Well; what would you, Lettice?"

"It is early morning; there is no one beside me; come with me to the house, for I must speak with you. And what I say even the air must not carry.
Come, Patrick; for the love of Heaven, come."

Her face was haggard, her words wild. She dragged rather than led him into the room where the two boys had once used to study with her father.
There she began speaking hurriedly.

"Did you hear nothing last night? no foot-steps—no sounds?"

"No; yet I scarcely slept."

"Nor I." And two young faces dropped, unable to meet each other's, eyes. But soon Lettice went on: "At dawn, as I lay awake, it seemed as if there were voices beneath my window.
I did not look I thought it might be."

"William sometimes rises very early," said the brother gravely.

"It was not Lord Gowrie, for I heard them speak his name. Your hopes from King James were false! Oh, Patrick, there is danger—great danger! I learned it all!"

"How?" And rousing himself, the young man regarded eagerly Lettice's agitated mein.

"I opened the lattice softly," stealthily to the water's edge. Patrick, they said on the night but one after this they will return and seize you in the king's name! Fly—fly! Do not let me lose forever both my brothers!"

And she caught his hands as in her childhood she used to do, when beseech-ing him to do for her sake many things which, from dreamy listlessness, he never would have done for his own.

"What must I do, Lettice—I, who know nothing of the world? Why did you not tell all this to William?"

"—tell William?" She blushed scarlet and seemed struggling with deep emotion.

"Oh, true—true!" Patrick said, and there seemed a faint waking up in his passionless features. "No matter; I will at once go and tell my brother."

Lettice sat down to wait his return.
All her murmur was—"Oh, William!— poor William!—so truly loving me whom others love me not at all! I turned from thee in thy prosperity, but now shall I save thee and lose myself—shall I sacrifice all to thee?" But instintively rather than wisdom whispered to Let-tice, that she, who was, knowing her heart is not with her husband, wilfully sacrifices both. In the sight of heaven and earth she takes a false vow, which if requited not by man, will assuredly be avenged by God.

Patrick Ruthven came back in much agitation. "He says he will not fly; that he needs neither the prison nor the block; that he has no joy in life, and death is best." Lettice, go to him; you only can."

"How can I save him?" mournfully Lettice cried.

"By urging him to fly. We can take horse, and cross the country to Harwich, whence a ship sails for France tonight. I know this, for yesterday I too, was planning how to depart."

"No matter," said Patrick hurriedly.
"Only go to William; compel him to save his life, he will do so at your bidding."

He spoke commandingly, as if fraternal love had transformed the gentle timid youth into a resolute man. Let-tice, wondering and bewildered, mechanically obeyed. She came to Lord Gowrie, who, with the disordered aspect of one who has wasted the night in misery, not sleep, lay on the floor of what had been the boys' play room.
To all her entreaties he only turned his face to the wall and answered not. At last his brother beckoned Lettice away.

Looking at Patrick, the girl marvelled. All his impassive coldness seemed to have melted from him. His stature seemed to rise into dignity, and there was a nobility in his face that made it beautiful to see. Lettice beheld in him, for the first time, the likeness of what she knew he would one day become—a grand, true man; the man before whom a woman's heart would instinctively bow down in Eve-like submission, murmuring—"I have found thee, my sustainer, and guide!"

Patrick stood silent awhile, sometimes reading her face, sometimes casting his eyes downward, as if he were struggling with inward pain. At last he said solemnly, "Lettice, this is no time for idle scruple. I know all that took place yesterday. I know, too, there is one only chance, or William is lost. Is your will so firm that it cannot change?
Must he die for loving you—my dear, my noble brother, whom I would give my poor life to save? Lettice, in this great strait, I entreat you—even I!"

And he shuddered visibly—"Consider what you do. It is awful thing to have life and death in your hands. I beseech you let him love you and be happy."

Lettice listened. As he spoke, slowly —slowly—the young rich blood faded from her face; she became rigid, white and cold; all the life left was in her eyes, and they were fixed on Patrick, as if it were the last look of one dying.

"Answer me," she said with a measured, toneless voice—"answer me truly on your soul. Do you desire this of me?
Is it your wish that I should become your brother's wife?"

"My wish—my wish?" he muttered, and then came clear and distinct, as one says the words which fix the sentence of a lifetime, "In the sight of God, yes!"

Lettice gave him her hand, and he led her again to his brother.

"I need not say," he whispered: "it Lettice will say all—better say it at once."

She looked at Patrick with a bewildered, uncertain air, and then began to speak.

"Lord Gowrie, that is, William, I!" She said no more, but fell down at Patrick's feet in a death-like swoon.

Lettice lay insensible for many hours.
For there was no firewood—when she awoke, the two brothers were gone, and on her finger a ring, the only tokens of the last passionate embraces which William had lavished on her, whom he

CARRIAGE MAKING BUSINESS,

In Jacksonville, Ala.

THE undersigned having recently purchased the right to "HUBBARD'S PATENT COACH SPRING," a very valuable and unequalled improvement, forming a self-adjusting Spring, for all kinds of carriages, respectfully informs the public, that he is at all times prepared to make Carriages, Rockaways, Barouches, Buggies &c., in the most neat fashionable and durable style, with or without the improvement above mentioned. He is still at his old stand on main street north-west of the Court House, and has constantly in employment a sufficient number of good workmen to enable him to execute all work in his line to order, with neatness and dispatch, new work as well as all descriptions of repairing.

Persons who may wish to purchase any description of Carriage, will generally find new work on hand, to suit their taste. He will also in future be prepared to convey passengers, at reasonable rates, to any desired point, and also to hire the day to those who may wish, Buggies, Barouches.

He would call special attention to the very valuable patent Spring mentioned above and inform the public that he is authorized to sell shop and County right for this and several adjoining Counties.

WARE HOUSE

Commission Merchants,

ROME, GEORGIA.

The undersigned respectfully inform their friends and the public generally, that they have entered into a partnership, for the purpose of doing a Ware-house and Commission Business, under the firm and style of M. A. STOVALL & Co. They will have completed by the first of September, 1852, a large and commodious Ware House, immediately in the centre of the business part of Rome, where they will be prepared to receive, store and sell any species of merchandise; Cotton, Corn, Wheat, Bacon, &c. &c. They will also make liberal advances on cotton or other produce in store or will ship the same to Charleston, Savannah or Augusta, charging only the legal interest on the amount advanced. From the long experience of one of the firm in the Commission Business they flatter themselves they present advantages to planters sending produce to this point, not surpassed by any House in Rome. Their charges will correspond with those of other Houses in the city.

ANOTHER SCIENTIFIC WONDER.
GREAT CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA!
DR. HOUGHTON'S

PEPSIN
OR DIGESTIVE FLUID.

GASTRIC JUICE.
PREPARED from REXNET, or the fourth Stomach of the Ox, after direction of Dr. Von Liebig, the great Physiological Chemist by J. S. Houghton, M. D. Philadelphia, Pa.

"I DIGEST." Such is the true meaning of the word Pepsin. It is the chief element, or Great Digesting Principle of the Gastric Juice—the Solvent of the Food, Purifying, Preserving, and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and Intestines. It is extracted from the Digestive Stomach of the Ox, thus forming a TRUE DIGESTIVE FLUID, precisely like natural Gastric Juice in its Chemical powers, and furnishing a COMPLETE and PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for it.

This is NATURE'S OWN REMEDY for an unhealthy Stomach. No art of man can equal its curative powers. It contains no ALCOHOL, ACIDS, or NAUSEOUS DRUGS. It is extremely agreeable to the taste, and may be taken by the most feeble patients who cannot eat a water cracker without acute distress.

Beware of DRUGGED IMITATIONS. Pepsin is NOT A DRUG.

Half a teaspoonful of Pepsin infused in water, will digest or dissolve Five Pounds of Roast Beef in about two hours, out of the stomach.

SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE!
THE SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE upon which this remedy is based is in the highest degree CURIOUS and REMARKABLE.

Call on the Agents, and get a Descriptive Circular, gratis, giving a large amount of SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE, from Liebig's Animal Chemistry; Dr. Comby's Physiology of Digestion; Dr. Pereira on Food and Diet; Dr. John W. Draper, of New York University, Prof. Duguid's Physiology; Prof. Silliman, of Yale College; Dr. Carpenter's Physiology; &c., together with reports of CURES from all parts of the United States.

Pepsin in Fluid and Powder.

Dr. HOUGHTON'S PEPsin is prepared in Powder and in Fluid Form—and in Prescription vials for the use of Physicians. The Powder will be sent by Mail, free of Postage, for one Dollar, sent to Dr. Houghton, Philadelphia.

OBSERVE THIS! Every bottle of the genuine PEPsin bears the written signature of J. S. HOUGHTON, M. D., sole proprietor, Philadelphia, Pa. Copy-right and Trade Mark secured.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicines. Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

LATEST FASHIONS.

PLEASANT G. MAY, (late of the firms of Wynne & May and of Satterfield & May) and John Ray have associated themselves together in the Tailoring business.

They return thanks to their respective friends and customers for the liberal patronage heretofore extended to them, and announce that they have opened shop in copartnership at the old stand of John Ray on the east side of the public square in Jacksonville under the firm name and style of

MAY & RAY.

They are in the receipt of the latest fashions from all the northern and eastern cities and are prepared to execute all work intrusted to them in the best and most durable manner and according to the latest fashions. They feel confident they can give general satisfaction as to fit and style, and solicit a liberal share of public patronage.

$500 CHALLENGE!
HOBENSACK'S WORM SYRUP.
An article founded upon Scientific Principles, comprising with purity, Vegetable substances being perfectly safe when taken, and has never been known to fail in curing the most obstinate cases. Worms can never exist, when this remedy is used, from the fact that it not only destroys them but removes all the slime and mucus which may remain.

The Tape Worm.
This worm is the most difficult one to destroy of all that inhabit the human body. It grows to an almost indefinite length, and growing so called and entangled in the intestines and stomach, as to produce Fits, St. Vitus Dance, &c., which is the cause of many going to the grave, not believing that these complaints have their origin in the Tape Worm. Consequently they do not use the proper medicines for their disease. To those who are afflicted with this awful foe to health, I recommend the use of my
